THE ROYAL ORDER OF THE RACCOONS

Messages from The Grand Poo-Pah

We are rolling right along with 2014 — notice that it is already October 14th. The lodge is full of fun tonight for Raccoon members. Our theme is baseball. The world series is coming up and soon we will know the two teams to play in the World Series of baseball. Susie will have a special board for Raccoon members this evening.

Our huge $500 poker tournament was a big hit. We started with a limit of 40, four tables, but the interest was so high and we filled up so quickly we expanded to 50. We ended up with 53 players as those who got beat out early could either buy back in or the next player on the list could jump in. POKER is fun and the dealers can sure help you learn how to play. Remember the house does not have any players in the game. Kristi has two smaller stakes poker tournaments for November and December. Small stakes tournaments fill up quickly.

Nickels will soon have all the Halloween decorations in place to make this club room "Spooksville". Watch for the TV ads promoting stopping by Nickels for Halloween. Lots of treats and only a few tricks.

DUES NOTICE

Susie is accepting dues for the current year and they remain at $25.00. The prime rib dinner that is featured in the spring along with a long happy hour costs the club treasury more than that. Discounted drinks during meeting nights, often food for snacking, drawings and lot's a ogha ogha ogha.

Want a shrimp cocktail? Only four bucks at Nickels.

(Newser) - Mission accomplished. National Parks workers have caught a wily raccoon that's been roaming the White House grounds for weeks, notes the Washington Post. After vegetarian fare failed to entice the masked critter, trappers successfully employed salmon. "They're a finicky bunch," said [then] press chief Robert Gibbs.

The good news: The unharmed raccoon was released in an "undisclosed location."

The bad: It's not the only White House raccoon.
(Is that really so bad?)
